

ABSTRACT

An assembly machine forms structural elements for false ceilings. The structural elements are cut to size and sent to two series of lateral stations. A press forms inserts which are applied to the ends of the structural elements.